IX CONGRESS ABOUT STUDENT MOVEMENTS

Program Tracks for Proposal Submissions

I. New theoretical-methodological approaches

- Between global and local: links between geographies and temporalities.
- Transnational studies: migrations, circulations, connections, receptions.
- Comparative studies: potentialities and limitations.
- "Situated" studies, South-South dialogues or studies from the periphery

II. Historical studies on Student Movements

- Associativism, sociability and student activism.
- Art, culture and student movements.
- The union and the political: dichotomy or complement?
- Secondary student movements in the world.
- Alliances between student movements and other social movements and/or political parties.
- Protest cycles and collective action repertoires at local, regional and transnational levels: contemporary and similar?
- Violence, repression and rights-wing groups against and in Student Movements.
- Memories and representations of the student movements pasts.
- Stories, voices, trajectories of women and the diversities in Student Movements.

III. Studies on Student Movements in the XXI century

- Student movements, feminist movements and LGTBIQ+ activism: articulations and distancing in the 21st century.
- Student movements and ecological youth movements: between local anchors and the transnational agenda.
- The student body in the struggles against contemporary authoritarian governments.
- Student movements during the COVID-19 pandemic: between union struggles and the reconfiguration of militancy.
